Thank you for your leadership and support.

FROM VISION TO IMPACT

BOLD THINKING SOLVES BIG PROBLEMS

When Kellogg students have a great idea, they also have the confidence and courage to act on it and the resources to support it. Take JD-MBA students Ben Hernandez '13 and Tabrez Ebrahim '13 and their idea about how to store natural gas more efficiently.

Enabled by the collaborative spirit that extends throughout the university community, the two teamed with Chris Wilmer, a doctoral student at the McCormick School of Engineering, and Omar Farha, a research associate professor of chemistry in the Weinberg College of Arts and Science, to explore the idea in depth.

With support from our faculty, the team discovered how to design and synthesize high-performance materials that soak up gases like a sponge and can be produced on a scale large enough for industrial applications — a process that fundamentally changes the economics of countless gas storage applications, including natural gas vehicles.

Their start-up venture, NuMat Technologies, won more than five competitions in 2012, including top honors in the U.S. Department of Energy's first-ever Clean Energy Business Plan Competition, which awarded a $100,000 cash prize and $80,000 of in-kind support.

In many ways, NuMat is a product of what makes Northwestern and Kellogg special — fostering a collaborative spirit that can be applied to innovative endeavors.

FROM VISION TO IMPACT PIONEERING SPIRIT CREATES REAL VALUE

Envision Kellogg, our strategic framework for educating, equipping and inspiring leaders for the future, asserts one of Kellogg's core tenets: The capacity for innovation is humankind's greatest asset and the ultimate source of value creation in the marketplace.

This is the inspiration and foundational principle of the Kellogg Innovation and Entrepreneurship Initiative (KIEI). Launched in 2012, KIEI aims to connect our thought leadership, student education and alumni network with real-world opportunities to build and sustain businesses that create long-term value and impact.

Kellogg's new entrepreneurship curriculum, already in the making, will serve as a launch pad for students from across our MBA programs, empowering them with the knowledge, skills and entrepreneurial spirit required to start and succeed in their own companies immediately upon graduation.

As critical as new venture creation is to its mission, KIEI distinguishes itself with its focus on innovation in large corporations and within middle market companies — specifically private and family enterprises — that account for $3.8 trillion in private sector GDP and until now have remained relatively underserved by MBA programs.

Our goal is to build a world-leading innovation and entrepreneurship platform that can best unleash the ideas, energy and talent of our students, faculty and alumni.

START-UP VENTURES GET A HEAD START

What kind of person earns a Kellogg MBA and ends up cleaning baby strollers for a living? Jennifer Beall '10 came up with an enterprising answer.

While serving as a Kellogg intern for Mary Liz Lehman '06, owner of Chicago's Perchance clothing boutiques, Beall spotted a problem ripe for solving: soiled and stained baby strollers and car seats. Her entrepreneurial spirit went into gear, and the idea for an eco-friendly cleaning service was planted.

Beall crafted a business plan, refined it in Clinical Professor James Shein's Entrepreneurship and New Venture Formulation class, immersed herself in Assistant Professor Yael Hochberg's Venture Lab and learned about customer care in Lecturer Richard Honack's Services Marketing and Management course. Leveraging every resource she could in the Kellogg community, including contacts across the alumni network, she gained the support she needed, and CleanBeeBaby was born.

Today, the LA-based company operates on premises at 35 children's boutiques, cleaning and repairing strollers and car seats while customers shop, saving parents valuable time and effort, and creating a captive audience for the retail partners. The company also makes house calls and recently launched a pilot program with Westfield Shopping Malls, which has operations nationwide, as it begins its second round of fundraising to finance growth through franchising.

Kellogg gave me access to a wealth of resources, including advice from professors, access to other entrepreneurs and investors, input from fellow classmates and alumni and, most importantly, the confidence to move forward with my new business venture.

BUSINESS DONE WELL CAN DO GREAT GOOD

At Kellogg, we say that business is the dominant social force in the world today. We challenge our faculty, students, alumni, and partner organizations to consider and accept the enormous responsibility that comes along with that.

The Global Health Initiative (GHI), an alliance of Kellogg, the McCormick School of Engineering, private industry, and donors, epitomizes this visionary approach to thinking about and doing business.

GHI identifies the most pressing health problems facing underserved communities around the world and then gathers and applies the resources necessary — research, innovation, testing and private funding — to develop products and services that help solve them.

To date, more than 500 Kellogg students have participated in research and development efforts to address issues associated with malaria, tuberculosis, polio and HIV/AIDS. In 2012, efforts included ventures focused on HIV diagnostics in Botswana, viral load technology in Brazil and diabetes monitoring services in India. GHI was named an “Up and Comer” winner at the 2012 Chicago Innovation Awards.

We are committed to providing rigorous, relevant experiences for students in the intersection between management and society.

CUTTING-EDGE RESEARCH CHANGES LIVES

If emotions shape the way human beings think and the choices they make, how do emotions affect economic decision-making? What impact do emotions have on the way investors approach risk and reward and how consumers behave?

For answers, ask Associate Professor Camelia Kuhnen, recognized for her expertise and research in the emerging field of neuroeconomics. Kuhnen's findings about the brain mechanisms behind economic choice and financial risk-taking have major implications for understanding how investors behave in the marketplace and what business schools teach about it.

In a recent study funded by Kellogg, Kuhnen reported that a genetic factor related to memory and emotional control determines learning performance for some investors. For these individuals, financial education can help overcome genetic disadvantages that would otherwise contribute to errors in decision-making.

Fittingly, Kellogg's core curriculum in finance and its investment in neuroeconomic research may lead to better business decisions by others.

The MBA student or investor would do well not to dismiss the subtly powerful force of the primitive brain.

2012 CLASS GIFT PLEDGES

The Kellogg School is grateful to the 2012 graduates for their support of their respective class gift campaigns. The class gift builds a lifelong connection between the school and its alumni. Class gifts are established by each graduating program to help Kellogg keep its competitive edge and enhance the experience for future students. The support and generosity of our newest Kellogg alumni reflect the value the recent graduates place on their experience and their commitment to the continued success of the school.
